

0. You can listen to many different storytellers online. Sometimes, it's easier to enjoy and learn a story when you hear someone else telling it. You will then make it your own by telling it many times. On my channel, you can find videos of my favourite storytellers. Rebecca Lemaire: https://www.youtube.com/channel/UCt6V6DQVSTSWuvlSGg_dPDw

1. Fantastic user friendly website with lots of stories (audio and written text) – stories by age, theme, etc.

www.storymuseum.org.uk/1001stories/

2. Another great website with text and audio. Stories from around the world. Maybe you and your kids would like to participate in sending art work around a story?

www.worldstories.org.uk

3. More web resources with a large number of folk tales.

<http://www.pitt.edu/~dash/folktxts.html>

<http://www.sacred-texts.com/>

<https://www.storiestogrowby.org/choose-a-story/>

4. Tales with annotations

<http://www.surlalunefairytales.com/>

5. Animated stories for ideas.

<http://www.bookbox.com/>

6. Short stories sorted by genre and age

<http://short-stories.co.uk/>

7. Sparkle box for resources based on stories.

<http://www.sparklebox.co.uk/literacy/stories/#.V3vn0ZN95E4>

8. Another good website for ideas. You have to pay to subscribe but you can view a lot of the stories on Youtube. Most of them are traditional so you might also find the text in some of the above websites.

<https://storycove.com/stories>

9. Augusthouse.com has lots of resources too. Some of them based on storycove.com stories. Downloadable PDF lesson plans linked to the stories by grade.

<http://www.augusthouse.com/#!learning-resources/c218n>

10. For creating stories. Writing. <https://storybird.com/>

11. Another great website: <http://www.storylineonline.net/>